The following report deals with the effect of the death of Stalin, as well as other recent international developments, on the thinking of Italian Jewish circles. The report is disseminated as background material, a link in the development of Italian Jewish opinion. It is outdated in that such opinion cannot be expected to remain static in view of more recept international developments.

- 1. The death of Stalin has contributed to the uncertainty which developed in Italian Javish circles as a result of recent international events. Especially since the war, Javish people had considered Stalin as one of the principal defenders of the Behreu nation. They had done so in spite of their political opinions, and in spite of certain reservations about him... Italian Java held a different opinion of Kalankov. They believed that he and his supporters represented the old Russian anti-Semitian and felt that under Kalankov's administration, the Soviet policy of anti-Semitian would be accentuated.
- 2. The breeking off of diplomatic relations between the USSR and Israel had a more profound effect on Italian Jews than did the Slanski trial or the accusation of the Jewish physicians in Moscow. Even Jews who do not want to live in Palestine feel a certain political and moral tie with the State of Israel. The termination of diplomatic relations has been interpreted as the adoption by the USSR of anopuly anti-Semitic policy. This breach of diplomatic relations, rather than prior events, changed the attitude of the majority of the Jews who previously supported the request for clenency for the Hosenbergs. Host of the Jews now feel that the Hosenbergs should be punished as encoies.
- 3. Anti-Soviet feeling is very strong among Orthodox Jews and those in sympathy with the present Italian Covernment or the Rightist opposition. Heatility toward Jewish Communists and Jews politically collaborating with the Soviets and the Satellites has increased.

- b. Communist and Communist sympathicing Jews have initiated counter-action which may have been directed by recent instructions from Moscow. The prote-panda line taken by them is as follows: Even if Halenkov admits anti-semitism, he can never promote this policy to the extend that Bitler did because it is forbidden by the Communist Party. Soviet action is not directed against the Hebrew mation as such, and therefore cannot be considered an aspect of a racial struggle. Such action is directed against the Jewish bourgeoisis and is therefore an aspect of a class struggle. Affirmation is made to Jewish circles that the Satellites will maintain diplomatic relations with Israel. It has been removed that Jewish emigration from Iron Curtain countries will not be interrupted, but that small groups will be permitted to emigrate as before.
- Communist counter-propaganda does not seem to have had great success among the Jews. Communist cells are, however, active.
- 6. Jewish connected circles, feeling that business is business, will reportedly refuse to allow communical activities to be influenced by political events, in view of the possibilities offered by Iron Curtain countries.
